Sandwiches

Unit: Preparing Foods

Problem Area: Hors d'oeuvres, Canapes, Appetizers, and Sandwiches

Lesson: Sandwiches

Student Learning Objectives.

Instruction in this lesson should result in students achieving the following objectives:

1. Classify common sandwich components.
2. Categorize sandwiches.

Key Terms.

The following terms are presented in this lesson (shown in bold italics):

- bread
- canapé
- cold sandwiches
- Cubano
- filling
- garnish
- gyro
- hot sandwiches
- Monte Cristo
- muffuletta
- multi-decker sandwich
- open-face sandwich
- Panini
- po-boy
- portion control devices
- Pullman loaf
- sandwich
- sandwich station
- spreads
- tea sandwich
- tzatziki
- wrap

Interest Approach.

Use an interest approach that will prepare the students for the lesson. Teachers often develop approaches for their unique class and student situations. A possible approach is included here.

> First, ask students to list the tools and equipment typically required at a sandwich station. Then ask them to define a Pullman bread loaf and tea sandwiches. Collect their answers to review as an assessment of their pre-knowledge.

If possible, bring in a variety of canapés (e.g., different crackers and cocktail rye bread with various fillings, spreads, and garnishes). Allow students to view them and to snack. When students are done snacking, pose a situational awareness prompt, such as, "Now, thinking about the sandwiches only, tell me about the fillings that were used." NOTE: It may be important to remind students that according to the Dictionary of Gastronomy, "The American sandwich is enormous, and a single one suffices. It may be a two- or three-decker sandwich filled with an assortment of foods."

Use the ensuing student responses to inform the class that they have indeed had sandwiches, specifically canapés, and every one of them had a filling. If there was any doubt about it before, students should now be ready to acknowledge that they do not know everything about sandwiches.

CONTENT SUMMARY AND TEACHING STRATEGIES

Objective 1: Classify common sandwich components.

Anticipated Problem: What are the main components of sandwiches?

I. Main components

A. According to the Dictionary of Gastronomy, a sandwich is a piece of meat or other food (cooked or uncooked) pressed between two slices of buttered bread. Before the Earl of Sandwich, sandwiches were described as "bread and meat" or "bread and cheese." The origin and namesake of the sandwich is said to be John Montagu, Lord of Sandwich. Legend has it that the Montagu was a gambler who hated to leave the gaming tables. Apparently, his chef designed the first sandwich so Montagu could eat at the table. Sandwiches come in two main categories: cold and hot. They run the gamut from dainty tea types (cold) to "knife-and-fork" main meal (hot) varieties. However, all sandwiches have four main components (though all four may not always be used): bread, spread, filling, and garnish.

1. Bread is the "packaging" that holds the sandwich together; makes it easy to eat; and adds flavor, texture, and nutrients. For sandwiches, bread is typically fine textured for ease of handling and for ease of making crisp cuts. Bread also provides a chef or a cook with an opportunity to be creative because of its enormous variety and endless shapes, textures, and flavors. Some examples are:
   a. Flatbreads—tortilla and lavash wraps
   b. Stuffed sandwich breads—pita, croissant, ciabatta, focaccia, and baguettes

Copyright © by CAERT, Inc. | Reproduction by subscription only. | L700063

c. Crackers and matzo
d. Rolls, buns, English muffins, and bagels
e. Trimmed and cut or sliced cocktail loaves
f. Sliced sandwich loaves, including the Pullman loaf (a square-cornered rectangle without the typical white bread "crown" that provides perfectly square slices)

2. Spreads are soft and malleable coatings that cover the surface of bread, adding flavor and moisture to a sandwich. Spreads include butter, mayonnaise, salad dressings (e.g., oil and vinegar, Miracle Whip, Thousand Island, French, Bleu Cheese, and Green Goddess), condiments (e.g., ketchup, mustard, and relish), and specialty spreads (e.g., hummus, guacamole, and cream cheese mixtures). Another purpose of a spread is to keep the bread from becoming soggy by shielding it from direct contact with the other sandwich ingredients. For example, egg salad and tuna salad would easily seep into the bread and make the sandwich more difficult to handle. Spreads that prevent soggy bread are usually high in fat, such as butter or margarine. Spreads include:
   a. Nut, fruit, wine, and honey butters
   b. Jellies and jams
   c. Tapenade
   d. Horseradish and horseradish sauce
   e. Garlic mayonnaise
   f. Marmalade
   g. Chutney
   h. Barbeque sauce
   i. Honey mustard dressing or vinaigrette
   j. Pesto sauce
   k. Tartar sauce
   l. Salsa
3. The filling of a sandwich is the primary ingredient, providing the key flavor, nutrients (typically protein), and often the sandwich name. Fillings are numerous, including sliced meats and cheeses; mixture salads (e.g., tuna or egg); whole pieces of chicken, fish fillets, sausages, or burgers; and, "meaty" vegetables (e.g., portabella mushrooms and eggplant) and other sautéed vegetables. Other fillings include:
   a. Peanut and other nut butters
   b. Meatloaf and meatballs
   c. Fried eggs
   d. Lobster and other seafood
4. A garnish is one or more items added to improve flavor and appearance. Garnishes for sandwiches can be on the sandwich (e.g., lettuce, tomato, sprouts, or other cooked or raw vegetables) or served as a side accompaniment (e.g., pickle spear, pepperoncini, dipping sauce, or coleslaw). Aside from adding flavor, embellishment, and variety to the sandwich, garnishes add color, texture, and nutrients.

B. Sandwich station and techniques

1. A sandwich station is an area of the kitchen specifically set up for bulk preparation of sandwiches. The ways in which to prepare sandwiches are almost as varied as the ingredients. A sandwich station should be well-organized, with the required tools and equipment, prepared ingredients, plates or baskets, liners, garnishes, and any other items to prepare and plate sandwich orders readily at hand.
2. Portion control devices are tools and equipment that ensure all servings are the same size. Devices include balance and electronic scales, scoops, ladles, pre-portioned units (e.g., cups for soup, French fry packages, and pre-portioned cracker packages), and any other proprietary tool or device to keep all servings the same size. Portion control devices ensure that every sandwich has the same quantity of each component as every other sandwich of its kind. Franchise restaurants are moneymakers because the portions, regardless of location, remain exactly the same. Portion control is the first line of defense in cost control.
3. The sandwich station set up reflects the variety of sandwiches offered on the menu, specifically as it relates to the category of sandwich served. Typical tools and equipment for all sandwich stations are:
   a. Stainless steel or other worktables
   b. Portion control equipment
   c. Gloves
   d. Cutting boards
   e. Knives (e.g., paring, serrated, slicer, and chef) and sandwich spreaders
   f. Tongs
   g. Sink and a closely located hand-washing station
   h. Rubber scrapers and various spoons and forks
   i. Close access to ice and refrigeration
   j. Close access to heat sources
4. To assemble large quantities of cold sandwiches, tell your students that a typical process would be to do the following:
   a. Place sandwich bread or rolls heel-to-heel on a cutting board (i.e., all the "tops" in one row and all the "bottoms" in another row).
   b. Place spread just to the edges of the crust of each slice of bread, using a sandwich knife (a short oval knife with a rounded end; serrated on one side).
   c. Add garnish (e.g., lettuce, tomato, onion, and pickle) to the "bottoms" of all sandwiches.
   d. Portion the filling onto the "bottoms" (e.g., meat, cheese, and/or salad) using a predetermined amount (4 ounces or No. 8 scoop).
   e. Place the "top" onto the "bottom." Then slice, plate, and serve.

C. Categories

1. Cold sandwiches are sandwiches prepared and served with chilled ingredients, even if the filling or other elements were cooked earlier. Cold sandwiches are served cold, and they require adequate refrigeration space at the station, but no cooking equipment is needed. Some "cold" sandwiches are fully acceptable at room temperature, with the term "cold" reflecting that the sandwich would not be served hot.
2. Hot sandwiches are reheated sandwiches or fillings cooked from a raw state and served hot. Typically, the bread and the filling are heated through various methods, though only the filling is required to be served hot. The equipment needed at a hot sandwich station is always more involved than a cold station and may include:
   a. A flattop grill
   b. A microwave
   c. A deep fryer
   d. A panini press
   e. An oven

Teaching Strategy: In addition to lecture, use VM–A and VM–B to aid in a discussion.

Objective 2: Categorize sandwiches.

Anticipated Problem: How are sandwiches categorized?

II. Sandwich types

A. Cold sandwich category

1. Traditional cold sandwiches, typically on sandwich bread or a hard roll, are simple and often use common ingredients, such as:
   a. Peanut butter and jelly
   b. Luncheon meats (e.g., deli ham, bologna, and turkey) and cheese
   c. Salad-type fillings (e.g., egg, tuna, and chicken)
   d. Submarine or hoagie
2. A tea sandwich is a small, dainty, bite-size sandwich made on white bread or similar tender bread that always has the crust trimmed. At least two tea sandwiches could be cut from a slice of sandwich bread. The shapes vary widely. The filling is minimal and is exceptionally tender. For instance, finely chopped egg, tuna, or chicken for a salad-type filling or paper-thin slices of cucumber or watercress leaves are common. A tea sandwich is designed as a mid-day snack, historically served at formal "teas" to high-society ladies of the late 1800s. Now tea sandwiches are served at high-end hotels, resorts, and country clubs where the tradition of mid-day tea lives on. Examples from Martha Stewart and Ina Garten (The Barefoot Contessa) are:

a. Prosciutto and cucumber spread with chive butter
b. Pinwheel sandwiches with egg salad and chicken salad
c. Smoked salmon on buttered whole grain bread
d. Wasabi, salmon roe, and lemon cream cheese
e. Beet-and-goat cheese
f. Bacon and arugula with mushroom butter
g. Turkey with scallion cream cheese on raisin nut bread

3. A canapé is a bite-size, open-face sandwich that has a food item spread or placed on an edible base (usually bread). It is an elegant looking tidbit that is easy while socializing. A canapé often is highly decorative, easy to eat with one hand, and enough for one bite. It may be topped with aspic or piped with flavored butter or mayonnaise. A canapé is usually served with cocktails and/or at buffets.
   a. Base—Pullman loaf, black, or pumpernickel bread; sweet nut bread; a cracker; a crouton; half of a hard-cooked egg white; or a pastry shell
   b. Spread or topping—Caviar, shallot butter, pesto butter, nut butter, pate, lettuce circle with tomato butter, curried cream cheese, ham spread, or soft cheese
   c. Garnish—Piped cream cheese border, pimiento, green onion rounds, smoked oyster, radish roses, fresh dill, capers, and/or chopped parsley
4. A wrap is a flatbread (tortilla, pita, naan, spring roll wrapper, crêpe, or butterhead lettuce leaf) sandwich filled with spreads or sliced meats and vegetables that are folded or rolled up for service. It can be served hot, but it is commonly served cold as a whole wrap or sliced as a canapé. A wrap is typically a "light" entrée sandwich because of the thin nature of flatbread compared to buns, rolls, and thicker cuts of bread. Classic flatbread sandwiches are:
   a. Gyros (Greek)
   b. Crêpes (French)
   c. Spring rolls (Vietnamese)
   d. Sushi rolls (Japanese)
   e. Moo shu (Chinese)
   f. Tacos and burritos (Mexican)
   g. Fajitas (Mexican)
5. The muffuletta (moof-fuh-LEHT-tuh) is a sandwich served at room temperature. This Sicilian-style sandwich was created in New Orleans at the Central Grocery Company in the early 1900s. It is created on a round loaf of muffuletta bread filled with Italian salami, mortadella, and capicola meats; provolone cheese; olive salad; and freshly minced garlic. Today, some New Orleans restaurants serve a hot version and a vegetarian version. Olive salad is the key ingredient and typically includes:

a. Green and Kalamata olives, coarsely chopped
b. Pimiento, coarsely chopped
c. Garlic, minced
d. Anchovy fillet, mashed
e. Capers, drained and rinsed
f. Fresh oregano and parsley leaves, ground pepper, and extra-virgin olive oil

B. Hot sandwich categories

1. Fried sandwiches—These sandwiches may be pan- or deep-fried. Generally, fried sandwiches are made with nearly any variety of bread, though sandwich-style bread is typical. The final product is a browned, crispy appearance, similar to that of any other fried product. Lean meats and cheeses are examples of fillings suited for frying. The classic fried sandwich is a Monte Cristo, which is a grilled or deep-fried sandwich filled with sliced turkey, ham, and Swiss cheese; it is served with raspberry preserves. Some think the Monte Cristo looks similar to "a French toast sandwich."
2. Pressed sandwiches—Panini ("little sandwiches" in Italian) are sandwiches grilled on a "press" or "closed grill" in which heat is applied on both sides of the sandwich at the same time until the bread is crisp and the filling is warmed—toasted and showing "grill marks." Filling options are endless (e.g., turkey, salami, prosciutto, pesto, ham, and mushrooms. However, cheese is a common element. Panini are often somewhat flat in appearance, as they have been compressed in the closed grill. Ciabatta bread is commonly used.
3. Grilled sandwiches—Simple grilled sandwiches are cooked on a flattop grill as a whole sandwich and are flipped to grill both sides of the bread (e.g., grilled cheese, Reuben, and patty melt). The filling may or may not be precooked before grilling the sandwich. A patty melt is a good example of a grilled sandwich in which the "filling" has been cooked prior to grilling, whereas a grilled cheese sandwich is cooked directly on the grill from a completely cold state. A Cubano is a sandwich grilled in a press until the meats and pickles have warmed. These Cuban favorites are loaded with ham, pork, cheese, pickles, and butter or mustard. The bread is the most important part of the Cubano sandwich. Typically, it has a trademark split or gash down the center of the crust; the bread is crusty but tender.
4. Hot sandwiches—Hot sandwiches are most sandwiches in which the filling (and commonly the bread, but that is optional) is served hot. This ranges from a simple hot dog or hamburger to a French Dip beef sandwich to the classic "hot beef or turkey sandwich" to the Philly Steak Grinder.
   a. An open-face sandwich is a sandwich in which there is bread below the filling, not on top of it. The sandwich is usually served with mashed potatoes, stuffing, and gravy. This type of open-face sandwich is often termed a "knife-and-fork" sandwich (e.g., hot turkey sandwich, hot beef sandwich, or hot pork sandwich).

Copyright © by CAERT, Inc. | Reproduction by subscription only. | L700063

b. Po-boy (shortened from poor boy; a very inexpensive lunch option) is a sandwich staple in New Orleans at lunch counters. A high-quality French bread is the first step in making a true Po-boy sandwich; most are about 3 inches long and 3 to 4 inches wide. It is eaten "dressed" (with lettuce, tomato, pickles, mayonnaise, butter, ketchup, and Creole mustard) or with "nuttin" on. The filling can be almost anything you imagine. New Orleans favorites are:
   (1) Fried shrimp, crawfish, and oysters
   (2) French fries and gravy
   (3) Roast beef or ham
   (4) Hamburger or cheeseburger
   (5) Fried catfish

c. A gyro (YEER-oh) is a sandwich of Greek origin and consists of various rotisserie meats (e.g., lamb, beef, pork, and chicken; usually a mixture of beef and lamb pressed into a cone shape), tomatoes, lettuce, onions, and tzatziki on a toasted pita. Tzatziki (tsah-ZEE-kee) sauce is a mixture of yogurt, diced cucumber, dill, and vinegar. The rotisserie meat is shaved from the cone-shaped rotisserie and is briefly toasted on the grill.

5. Multi-decker sandwich—A multi-decker sandwich is a sandwich typically served hot (some are served cold) and includes at least three pieces of toasted bread. One slice typically separates the various layers of sandwich fillings. Spreads and garnishes are commonly used on each layer. Big Macs and club sandwiches are classic examples.

C. Other popular sandwiches are:
   1. Tacos and tostados
   2. Falafel
   3. Calzones
   4. Lox and bagels
   5. Western egg
   6. Soft-shell crab
   7. Croque Monsieur
   8. Croque Madame

Teaching Strategy: In addition to lecture, use VM–C, VM–D, and VM–E. Assign LS–A and LS–B.

Review/Summary. Use the student learning objectives to summarize the lesson. Have students explain the content associated with each objective. Student responses can be used in determining which objectives need to be reviewed or taught from a different angle. If a textbook is being used, questions at the ends of chapters may be included in the Review/Summary.

3. Portion control devices _____.

   a. include scoops, scales, and ladles
   b. ensure every portion looks somewhat different and original
   c. may include a scale and a soup cup
   d. are essential to place the proper garnishes on a sandwich

4. All of these could be used in a wrap sandwich except _____.

   a. lettuce
   b. a whole wheat tortilla
   c. ham
   d. an Italian roll

5. A good filling for a classic hot open-faced sandwich is _____.

   a. salami
   b. turkey
   c. chicken salad
   d. None of the above

6. The po-boy sandwich originated in _____.

   a. Sandwich, IL
   b. New York, NY
   c. New Orleans, LA
   d. Paris, France

Part Three: True/False

Instructions: Write T for true or F for false.

_____1. Sandwiches served at room temperature are considered "cold sandwiches."

_____2. A hot sandwich requires the filling or the bread to be hot.

_____3. A wrap sandwich is usually considered "lighter" fare because there is less "bread" in the sandwich.

_____4. A Panini is a grilled sandwich made in a "press."

_____5. Lettuce, tomato slices, pickles, mayonnaise, and coleslaw are all sandwich garnishes.

_____6. A muffuletta is a sandwich of Greek origin and consists of various rotisserie meats, tomatoes, lettuce, onions, and a tzatziki sauce on a toasted pita.

SANDWICH COMPONENTS

This BLT sandwich contains all four of the sandwich components: bread—toasted white; spread—mayonnaise; filling—bacon; and garnish—lettuce and tomato.

Measuring devices—scales, scoops, and ladles—ensure every portion is the same for every serving. For example, scoop sizes are based on a quart. So a No. 8 scoop is a ½-cup serving. For example, there are eight ½-cup servings in one quart.

SANDWICHES: TEA AND CANAPÉ

Tea sandwiches are small and delicate, with no crust. The ones pictured here are (from top to bottom): salmon, cucumber, and egg with watercress.

Canapés are tiny decorative open-face sandwiches and are just enough for one bite! The classic canapé is salmon on cream cheese, egg white, and caviar.

SANDWICHES: WRAPS AND OTHER COLD TYPES

Wraps can be assembled on any flexible flatbread, such as this tortilla, and then stuffed with any filling. Fajitas are a classic Mexican flatbread sandwich.

Cold sandwiches can be as simple as this ham and cheese on wheat or this submarine.

SANDWICHES: FRIED, GRILLED, PRESSED, OPEN-FACE KNIFE-AND-FORK, AND MULTI-DECKER

A Monte Cristo is the ultimate fried sandwich. It is often deep-fried and served with raspberry preserves.

The grilled Panini can be made with almost any bread—ciabatta preferred—and any filling. The sandwich is placed in a press that grills the top and bottom at the same time.

Identify the Parts!

Purpose

The purpose of this activity is to review sandwich elements and classifications.

Objectives

1. Identify sandwich elements.
2. Classify sandwiches based on given information.

Materials

- writing utensil
- notes
- paper

Procedure

1. Work independently.
2. Read each of the sandwich menu descriptions carefully. Then answer (on your paper) the following six questions about each sandwich:
   a. What type of bread is used?
   b. What type of spread is used?
   c. What is or are the filling(s)?
   d. What type of garnish is used?
   e. Is this a hot or cold sandwich? Could it be served the "other" way?
   f. Classify the type of sandwich (e.g., open-face, tea, canapé, etc.). Some sandwiches may fit in more than one category.

Name _____

Build a Sandwich Station

Purpose

The purpose of this activity is to review menu offerings to construct a sandwich station.

Objectives

1. Analyze the menu.
2. List tools and equipment needed at a sandwich station based on the menu.

Materials

- paper
- writing utensil
- class notes, textbook, and reference books
- Internet access

Procedure

1. Work independently or in pairs to complete this lab sheet.
2. To offer the following sandwich menu at your restaurant, you must determine the tools and equipment needed at the sandwich station to execute the offerings. Review the complete descriptions of each sandwich carefully. Then write a comprehensive list of all the tools and equipment needed to build a sandwich station. Consider the entire sandwich station area, not just the "work table." Think big picture, and take nothing for granted. You may use your class notes, textbook, other reference books, and the Internet when necessary. Use a separate sheet of paper to list your tools and equipment, and be prepared to defend your decisions in an open discussion.
   a. Big Baby Burger has two quarter-pound patties and two slices of cheese sandwiched between three bun sections that are each coated with bleu cheese dressing. It is topped with shredded lettuce, sliced avocado, and grilled onions. The sandwich comes with French fries. $8.95

b. Our Reuben Sandwich starts with marbled rye bread, slathered with Russian dressing, and piled high with corned beef, Swiss cheese, and sauerkraut. Perfectly grilled and cut in half, the sandwich comes with coleslaw and a pickle. $7.50

c. Italian Stromboli is a half loaf of Italian bread drizzled with Italian dressing. It is topped with ground Italian sausage, sliced mushrooms, and green peppers. Then it is covered in Provolone cheese and black olives. Next, it is popped in the oven until golden and bubbly. Our Stromboli comes with a side of pasta. $7.95

d. The house's Hot Pork Sandwich is almost enough for two. Two thick slices of Texas Toast line the plate. The toast is piled high with slices of roast pork and drenched in rich brown gravy. Our own "smashed" potatoes are served on the side with a cup of applesauce. $7.50

e. Our Classic BLT is a taste of home. Two slices of toasted wheat bread are dressed with homemade mayonnaise and piled with crunchy lettuce, sliced tomato, and crisp bacon. Potato salad and a cup of soup are served on the side. $5.95

f. The Pocket Pita Salad is a light lunch. Pita bread is cut in half and each side's "pocket" is filled with garden greens, tomato slices, onions, peppers, mushrooms, and olives. Then it is lightly dressed with balsamic vinaigrette. It is served with a fruit cup. $5.95

g. A Taste of Tapas! This collection of five cold, open-face, bite-size snacks from Spain are tasty and uniquely spicy. A variety of Spanish cracker and flatbread shapes are topped with combinations of Spanish cheeses, lamb, smoked salmon, and fruit. Three different dipping sauces—cucumber, plum, and honey mustard—accompany the tapas. $7.50

h. Our Blackened Salmon Sandwich is perfect for anyone who likes to try something new. A six-ounce fillet is seared with hot blackening spices to a crispy texture outside and perfectly moist on the inside. This spicy sandwich is served on grilled focaccia bread brushed with zesty mesquite mayonnaise and topped with sweet mango salsa. Our homemade sweet potato chips are served on the side. $8.50

3. Compare your list of tools and equipment with lists from other classmates.

4. Defend your answers.

5. Turn in your completed lab sheet to your instructor.
